Worshippers in safety hats attend Notre-Dame's first mass since fire

Most of the donations pledged had not been received yet.

A small congregation in white hard hats attended mass at Notre-Dame cathedral in Paris on Saturday, the first service since fire devastated the Gothic landmark two months ago.

Church leaders are keen to show life goes on at the cathedral as donations for rebuilding trickle in.

Less than 10 percent of the 850 million euros ($953 million) pledged by billionaires, business leaders and others had been received so far, the French government said.

The mass, which commemorates the cathedral's consecration as a place of worship, was held in a side chapel left undamaged by the April 15 fire, with attendance limited to about 30 people wearing protective headgear.

Priests in ceremonial garb of white robes and yellow stoles briefly parted with their hard hats during the communion.

> Paris' Archbishop Michel Aupetit

"It is with much emotion that we are here to celebrate the consecration of the cathedral," said Paris's Archbishop Michel Aupetit, who led the service.

"It is a message of hope and thanks to all those who were moved by what happened to this cathedral," he added, acknowledging afterwards it was "a bit strange" to celebrate mass with a helmet.

The service was broadcast live on a religious TV channel that showed poignant images of the blue sky through the collapsed roof and the black rubble still clogging the building.

On Friday, France's Culture Minister Franck Riester said the cathedral was still in a fragile state, especially the vault.

The blaze caused the roof and spire of the architectural masterpiece to collapse, triggering worldwide sadness.

Among those who promised to donate to the rebuilding effort were luxury goods tycoons Bernard Arnault and François-Henri Pinault. REUTERS

Phoenix mayor sorry after police pull gun on parents

2 The mayor of Phoenix apologized and called a community meeting for this week amid public anger over a viral video showing police pointing a gun at the parents of a young child over allegations she shoplifted a doll. Cellphone video showed a Phoenix officer drawing his weapon and shouting profanities after a father, mother and two young daughters left the Family Dollar store on May 27. Officers confronted the family in a parking lot, with at least one pulling his gun, cursing at the adults and yelling at them to put up their hands, while threatening to shoot them if they failed to comply, according to the cellphone video. Mayor Kate Gallego wrote on Twitter late on Saturday that the incident, which sparked anger on social media, made her feel "sick." She apologized to the family and noted that the city would speed up the rollout of body-worn cameras. REUTERS

Mexico detains nearly 800 undocumented migrants

3 Mexican officials detained nearly 800 undocumented migrants in eastern Mexico in four trucks on Saturday, the government said. Mexico's National Migration Institute (INM) said in a statement late on Saturday that 791 foreign nationals were found in the trucks stopped in the eastern state of Veracruz, confirming earlier reports about a mass detention. The apprehension came as Mexico steps up efforts to reduce a surge of migrants toward the U.S. border under pressure from President Donald Trump, who has vowed to hit Mexican goods with tariffs if Mexico does not stem illegal immigration. Mexico made a deal on June 7 with the U.S. to avert the tariffs, setting the clock ticking on a 45-day period for the Mexican government to make palpable progress in reducing the numbers of people trying to cross the U.S. border illegally. ## Investigation promised following Argentina blackout

4 Argentine President Mauricio Macri called the massive blackout that left tens of millions in South America without power on Sunday "unprecedented," and promised a thorough investigation. Argentina's grid "collapsed" at about 7 a.m. local time, leaving the entire country without power, Argentina's Energy Secretariat said. The outage also cut electricity to much of neighboring Uruguay and swaths of Paraguay, and shut down YPF's La Plata refinery, Argentina's largest. Macri said the blackout had been prompted by a failure in the country's coastal grid, but said that officials still did not know what had caused the problem. Half of Argentina had power by mid-afternoon, Macri said. "The city is a disaster. There are no traffic lights. Stores aren't open. It spoiled Father's Day," said 75-year-old retiree Liliana Comis, of Buenos Aires. REUTERS

Israel launches 'Trump Heights' on Golan, but construction may lag

The project comes after the president recognized Israel's sovereignty.

Israel approved in principle on Sunday a new community named after President Donald Trump on a contested frontier zone with Syria — but construction looked likely to lag given Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's political stumbles.

The "Trump Heights" project is intended to cement ties after Trump broke with other world powers to recognize Israeli sovereignty over the plateau in March.

At a special cabinet session in Beruchim, a sparse clutch of homes just 7.5 miles from the Golan Heights armistice line with Syria, Netanyahu unveiled a sign labeled "Trump Heights" in English and Hebrew.

The sign was decorated with the Israeli and U.S. flags and planted on a patch of synthetic grass.

Israel captured the Golan from Syria in a 1967 war and later annexed and settled it — moves not accepted by most world powers, who deem it to be occupied Syrian territory.

Ongoing hostilities between Israel and Syria, and internal Syrian fighting that drew Iranian-backed auxiliaries to back Damascus and deploy near the Golan, helped Netanyahu make his case for Trump to recognize the Israeli claim of sovereignty.

Trump similarly delighted Israelis — while appalling other world powers — by recognizing Jerusalem as their capital and withdrawing from the 2015 Iran nuclear deal.

"Trump is a great friend of Israel," Netanyahu said.

"He has torn the mask off this hypocrisy which doesn't recognize the obvious."

"DUMMY RESOLUTION"

Israeli authorities hope a revamping of Beruchim, home to an aging immigrant community from the former Soviet Union, to "Trump Heights" might bring a resident influx.

But a June 12 memorandum from Netanyahu's office showed the plan was far from implementation: it lacks earmarked funds as well as final approval for its precise location and name.

"In this [cabinet] resolution, it is proposed that the name of the community, if it is founded, be 'Trump Heights,'" said the memorandum, signed by a deputy legal counselor, Yael Cohen.

The hesitancy was in part due to the fact that Netanyahu heads a caretaker government, having failed to form a coalition after coming ahead in Israel's April 9 election. The conservative four-term premier must now contest a Sept. 17 vote.

In such an interval, Cohen wrote, legal rulings "require, as a general rule, restraint in decision-making" by the cabinet.

"Whoever reads the small print on the 'historic' resolution understands that it is a dummy resolution," tweeted Zvi Hauser, an ex-Netanyahu cabinet secretary now with an opposition party.

Netanyahu's political flailing has tested the patience of Trump, who earlier this month said Israel was "all messed up" over the election and needed to "get their act together."

Trump advisers had predicted the plan would be made public this month, but officials now say that is unlikely to happen until after the September election. REUTERS

Local pride drives Showtime's Boston-based 'City on a Hill'

The first episode of the cops-crooks-and-corruption series sets its sights on some hard hometown truths.

NATE HOMAN

ALL PHOTOS SHOWTIME

A wicked-big storm is brewing in Showtime's Boston-based "City on a Hill."

Irony abounds within the infamous camaraderie and cooperation between cops, crooks, a city's corrupt system and an impenetrable code of silence. "City on a Hill" also turns the spotlight directly on the town's fever pitch for "willful" segregation, and blind-eyed omerta when acknowledging the rampant racism dismissed as neighborhood locker room talk in a fictitious depiction of boys in blue chasing armored car boosters from Charlestown during the Charles Stuart era.

It's not 1983 anymore, and times have changed, but Kevin Bacon's character FBI Agent Jackie Rohr hasn't quite caught up yet. The embittered, hard-drinking, coke-snorting, gray-area-of-legal-landscape margin-walking, part-time concerned father, full-time head-breaking FBI agent teams up with a morally solid assistant DA looking to clean house in Boston's legal system from Beacon Hill to Bunker Hill.

"What used to make this city great is that it used to be run by bad men who understood that they were bad," he tells his inebriated law-enforcer friends.

Kevin Bacon has already been a cop in the city on a hill when he played the detective in that wicked-dark movie based on Dorchester native Dennis Lehane's wicked-dark novel, "Mystic River."

A fair share of locals offered a helping hand in crafting the cop drama to keep it authentic. Thus, the show features a Purity Supreme, cops drinking cups of Doughboy Donuts coffee, a guy in a scally cap scratching scratch tickets, a guy from Southie who says he ain't a rat and name-drops Lincoln Steffens, Doug Flutie and "Cadillac" Frank Salemme, the mafia goon who muscled control of The Channel in 1992.

Hyde Park native Jere Shea said what started as a part-time role turned into a season regular as Detective Hank Signa.

"This is a massable group of actors who are either from the area or have played Bostonians before in different roles who bring the level of authenticity that those who were starting from scratch could immediately catch on and embody," he says.

It also goes without saying that someone from the area probably knew somebody around town who might have known a little bit about something that happened that they didn't talk about back in the day.

"Growing up in Dot, we knew cops like that," actor Kevin Chapman told the Dorchester Reporter.

"They weren't necessarily by-the-book individuals, but they were ineffective in their own dysfunctional way. That's the way I approached J.R. He's not going to win awards for procedures and policies, but he gets it done."

Investigative reporter and author Michele McPhee offered a helping hand. She said the entire cast and crew were obsessed with making sure the era was exact with wardrobe, dialogue, set design and props.

"Boston has always been seen by the show creator as one of the main characters in 'City on A Hill,' a living, breathing entity," McPhee said. "The Boston Miracle spawned the community policing model for the BPD that has been duplicated all over the country, making that time and place nationally recognizable."

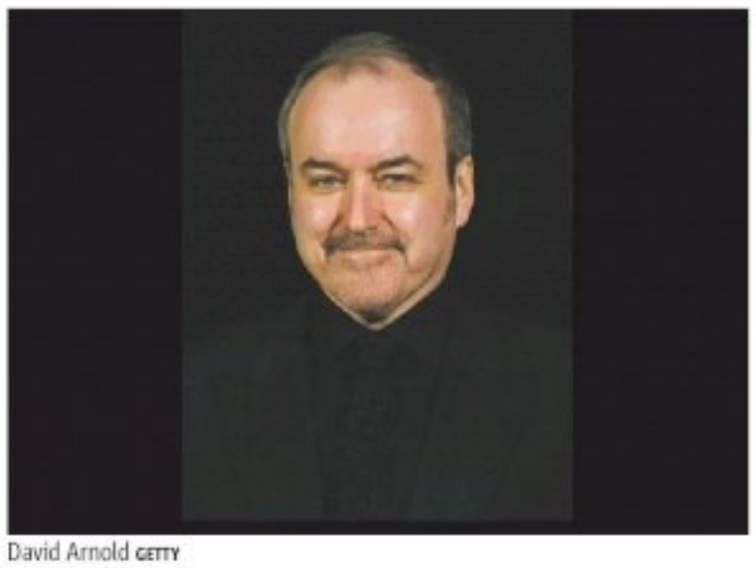
‘You have to answer the questions the film asks’

Film and television composer David Arnold discusses his latest project, “Good Omens.”

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us



David Arnold GETTY

You may not know seasoned film and TV composer David Arnold from first glance, but odds are you have heard his incredible work. Arnold is the mastermind behind some of the greatest film and television scores in the industry, including “Sherlock,” “Independence Day” and no fewer than five James Bond movies. Arnold’s latest project, Amazon’s new miniseries “Good Omens,” is certainly one for the books. The series is based on the 1990 novel by Terry Pratchett and Neil Gaiman and follows the story of a demon and angel who must become accustomed to life on Earth to prevent the coming of the antichrist and, ultimately, Armageddon. Arnold sat down with Metro to discuss his career, his process when composing masterpieces and why he fell in love with “Good Omens” in the first place.

How did you first get involved with composing for films and television?

I think I always wanted to do it. I went to see a bunch of films when I was about 7 or 8 years old at the cinema, and all of the films were extraordinary in everything including their massive soundtracks. Within a week I had been exposed to these extraordinary things in a cinema where everything is overwhelming, especially if you’re little. All of a sudden you’re in this place where it’s loud and dark, you feel this sort of excitement. There’s just so much joy in that experience and there is so much purpose and satisfaction in the end. I knew from that point on that I wanted to be a part of something that made me feel like that.

What’s your process like when writing for a project?

I don’t want to start writing anything until I’ve seen something. I’ve had many discussions with directors and producers, and I’ve read scripts and then I’ve seen the films. Sometimes when I see the films it isn’t how I imagined it or how I thought it might be or it isn’t quite what we discussed. Films take on a life of their own and they have a kind of sense of self and urgency. It’s suddenly out of the writer’s hands when everyone has input and opinions. Sometimes your job is to make sure it doesn’t veer off course. You have to deliver what you think [the project] needs. You have to try and deliver answers to the questions that the film or show is asking. So I will read the script because I think you’re mad not to read the script. What if you hate the script? Why would you even do the film then? So I try to do that, to get a sense of if I like it, and if it’s something I think I can do. I also want to like the people I’m doing it with. That’s important, when you feel in sync with the people you work with. You certainly don’t want to be doing something seven days a week and just do it to get it across the finish line.

Now jumping to “Good Omens,” what was the inspiration behind composing the score for Amazon’s new miniseries?

The inspiration for this is the picture itself and the story, it’s what made me go, “I have to do this.” I went to the first table reading and the first draft and it’s just an extraordinary group of people. I just had an understanding of the show and what it meant and what I was trying to do. It felt like a gig where there was a lot of connections, and everyone’s purpose was the same and we all knew why we were there.

You say you need to love a project to get involved. What do you love about “Good Omens”?

Regardless of the fact that it goes from the beginning of time to the end of time and takes place on Earth, [and in] heaven and hell, I think it is a story of true friendship and love between people.

USWNT rolls again, takes down Chile

The USA is off to the Round of 16 after another easy win in Group F play.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Different-looking squad, same result.

It wasn't exactly a 13-0 thumping like last week against Thailand, but the United States women's national team made easy work of Chile with a 3-0 win on Sunday afternoon.

The result clinched their place in the Round of 16 and helped the U.S. reclaim first place in Group F after Sweden temporarily went to the top after their win against Thailand.

Manager Jill Ellis made seven changes from the team that thrashed Thailand last week. She had a completely different starting trio in attack with Carli Lloyd, Mallory Pugh and Christen Press in for Alex Morgan, Tobin Heath and Megan Rapinoe.

Lloyd was keen on showing that she can still carry the U.S. attack after being designated as a substitute before the tournament, recording two goals on the day.

She made her presence felt almost immediately, getting the Americans off the mark in the 11th minute.

The 36-year-old New Jersey native cannoned home a left-footed volley from just inside the 18-yard box to put the U.S. ahead. Chilean goalkeeper Christiane Endler was rooted to her spot and could only watch as Lloyd's shot nestled into the back of the net.

It was a historic tally for Lloyd, who became the first player to ever score a goal in six straight games at the Women's World Cup.

It could have been much more for the U.S. had it not been for Endler. Her numerous dazzling saves served as a reminder that she is one of the best in the world. In total, she turned away six American shots in one of the most impressive displays of goalkeeping at the tournament so far.

Endler, however, couldn't keep out Julie Ertz's powerful header off a corner in the 26th minute. With her back toward goal, Ertz was able to direct a well-hit corner by Tierna Davidson inside the near post off Endler's hands and in.

Eight minutes later, Lloyd picked up her second off another corner from Davidson to put the U.S. in the driver's seat for good.

The U.S. had its fair share of chances in the second half to turn the affair into a blowout, but Endler robbed Press three times while Lloyd missed a penalty for her hat trick.

Among Ellis' other changes, Ertz went back into her holding midfield role while bringing the veteran center back Becky Sauerbrunn back into the fold. The defense looked strong yet again as Chile could muster just one single attempt toward the U.S. goal. Zero were on target.

With one remaining match in the group stage, the U.S. will meet Sweden on Thursday to decide the winner of Group F. Due to their superior goal difference, the U.S. will need either a draw or win to get the top spot.

Sweden has a history against the U.S. and will be considered the Americans' first real test of the World Cup. Ranked ninth in the world, Sweden knocked the U.S. out of the Olympics at the quarterfinal stage back in 2016.

Aries Broaden your outlook, knowledge and connections. Network, participate and listen to what others have to offer. Don't let someone's negativity stifle your plans. Retaliation will be a waste of time.

Taurus Make up your mind and follow through with your plans. Don't lend or borrow money or possessions. Base your actions on facts, not on emotions or hearsay.

Gemini A simple approach to what you want is favored. If you make a fuss or trust someone you shouldn't, disappointment will follow. You are best off doing your own thing.

Cancer Listen to what's being said or offered to you, but don't feel that you must make a decision. Facts matter, and you may be receiving an inflated version of the truth.

Leo You have more options, so don't settle for something that doesn't fit your criteria. Connect with people who have something to offer, but verify the information you receive before you get in too deep.

Virgo Give sensitive situations time to cool down. Focus on what you can accomplish. If you keep busy, it will be easier to distance yourself from conditions you cannot currently change.

Libra Don't try to change others when you should be looking inward and making personal adjustments that will improve your life. A positive change will help you avoid criticism.

Scorpio Keep the momentum flowing until you feel satisfied with the results. Refuse to let anyone disrupt your plans. Getting things done will satisfy you and boost your confidence.

Sagittarius Review personal papers that can shed light on an emotional situation. Whether faced with a financial, medical or legal matter, it's best to be fully aware of your options.

Capricorn If change is what you want, make it happen. Draw up a plan and get started. Much can be accomplished if you are practical and smart when making your dream come true.

Aquarius Improve your environment, living space or appearance. Don't let someone else design your look or dictate your lifestyle. Be innovative and do what suits you best.

Pisces Get out and meet people, and pitch in and help a cause. Look, see and do. Make bold commitments and follow through on them. Now's your time to shine. EUGENIA LAST
